Excerpt from Life of the Honourable William Tilghman, Late Chief Justice of the State of Pennsylvania: Compiled From the Eulogies of Two Distinguished Members of the Philadelphiabar, Who Delivered Them in Commemoration of His Virtues He then, who would form the imperishable model of wisdom, genius, and patriotism, must look inquiring to the mansions of the dead: it is there he may contemplate the virtues of its illustrious inhabitants, and raise his affections by great and noble examples of beneficence and love to man. Divine wisdom in the gracious expanse of its infinite mercy, has never refused the intelligent creation any possession of social good, which is compatible with our being, and worthy of our enjoyment. A wide, and at the same time, well organized universe, occupies the extensive sphere allotted to the enjoyment of man, a uniform and undivided council gave it existence, and the same power preserves its dominion: yet but one family compose its inhabitants. The living and the dead, are both subjects of its government; the one forever are guarded and guided by its providence, as the peculiar favourites of its grace, the other lives only in their virtuous reputation.
