Underwood, of Kentucky, Against the Admission of Kansas as a State Under the Lecompton Constitution: Delivered in the House of Representatives, March 30, 1858 Mr. Chairman: I use to essay no effort at elocution, nor any extended observations upon the vexed question of Kansas. Contemplating that question from a point of view differing from that of most if not all others that have addressed you, entertaining in regard to it opinions that have not yet found expression, duty to myself demands that I should announce the reasons that shall control my action. To those who know me at home I shall have no occasion to defend myself against any charge of intentional infidelity to the South and her cherished institutions. From the dawn of my humble political career, until now, they have had no more devoted friend than I. Born in a slave State, having lived in one all my life, a large owner of slaves, and representing one of the largest slave districts in the Union, it would be nothing short of impossibility for me to become faithless to its real interests. I have heretofore expressed my opinions on this poor with sufficient fullness upon the subject of the relations of master and slave. I will not repeat them. It is sufficient for me to say that I honestly regard them as the best possible relations which can exist between two dissimilar and unequal races of men thrown together upon the same territory, and that every attempt to create other relations than these, whilst the two races thus coexist, has thus far only deepened the degradation and misery of the black race. I...
