Excerpt from A Hand Book of Designs, Containing Plans in Perspective, of Court Houses, Universities: Academies, School Houses, Churches, Dwellings, Etc., Etc., Etc., And Suggestions Relative to Their Construction, Heating and Ventilation People too often suppose that the making of a picture representing a building, is what constitutes a person an architect; but this is an error. There is many a mechanic or builder, who has, as any person may in a few leisure hours, acquired the use of drawing instruments and paint brushes so as to enable him to draw and color something that will resemble a building; while not one in twenty of such individuals, working in an architect s office all the time for five years, could attain a sufficient knowledge of the business to be able to make a set of drawings for the com monest kind of a building, so that they should be ready for use, without being subjected to the most vigilant scrutiny of the principal of the office. The requisite qualifications of an architect are: first, to know how to design well, and for this...
