Modern Humanities Research Association, United Kingdom, 2006. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: French . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Today the President Henault (1685-1770) is perhaps best remembered for his Abrege chronologique de l'histoire de France. In addition, this academicien wrote several plays including Francois II, roi de France, a five-act tragedy depicting la jalousie des princes de sang contre messieurs de Guise . First published in 1747, the play was considered by Henault and his contemporaries to be the first of a new kind of theatre, one written specifically to be read rather than to be performed. It is therefore arguably the founding text of the tradition of armchair theatre that encompasses Diderot, Retif de la Bretonne, Musset and Hugo. It is a work that mediates between the page and the stage at a time of unprecedented investment by actors, architects and playwrights alike in the material theatre apparatus. Despite Francois II's historical, literary and cultural significance, this important text has not been published for over two centuries. The book takes as its base text the 1768 edition. This second edition features Henault's valuable preface in which he justifies his decision to write a history in dramatic form by appealing to the precedent set by Shakespeare and by discussing the reader's imaginative reconstruction of the dramatic apparatus. It also includes the dozen pages of the president's own explanatory notes. The introduction places the tragedy within the context of theatrical developments in mid eighteenth-century France, and considers Henault's other dramatic works, notably Le Reveil d'Epimede and Le Temple des chimeres, in order to clarify his understanding of dramatic illusion and the pleasures of the imagination. This critical edition of Henault's Francois II asks if we might re(de)fine our understanding of the...
